Copy Right Protection

Users may use, share, or adapt the content, provided they adhere to the guidelines outlined in the HEF User License:

- Cite the article properly, including the author(s), journal, title, volume, issue, page numbers, DOI, and the link to the published version on the HEF website.
- No part of a published paper should be used in another work without attribution.
- Users are free to use, share, and adapt the content, provided that proper credit is given to the original creators.
- If the article includes third-party content, ensure that its use follows the copyright rules of the third party.

Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International License (CC BY 4.0)

The HEF User License is based on the principles of the Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International License (CC BY 4.0), designed to facilitate the free use, sharing, and adaptation of content while ensuring the original creators receive proper credit for their work. This license empowers users to leverage educational, research, and creative materials for personal, commercial, and academic purposes, as long as they follow the specified guidelines.

By using materials under the HEF User License, you contribute to the open exchange of knowledge, fostering collaboration and innovation, while respecting the rights of content creators.

Guidelines for Using Content Under the HEF User License (CC BY 4.0)

Attribution

- You must give appropriate credit to the original creator(s) of their work. This includes providing the creator's name, the title of the work, and a link to the original source.

Permitted Uses

- The content may be used, shared, and adapted for any purpose, including commercial uses, provided the attribution requirements are met.

Modifications and Derivative Works

- You can modify the original content (e.g., by altering, transforming, or building upon it) as long as you follow the attribution requirements and describe the modifications.
- If you distribute modified content, the new version must be licensed under the same HEF User License (CC BY 4.0), ensuring that the same freedoms are granted to others.

No Endorsement or Affiliation

- The use of the work must not imply that the original creator endorses or is affiliated with any modifications or new works unless explicitly stated by the creator.

Restrictions

- Content cannot be used in any way that may infringe upon applicable laws, including using the work in a manner that promotes harm, defamation, hate speech, or illegal activities.
- The content should not be used in a way that could harm the reputation of the original creator or violate other legal or ethical considerations.

No Warranty

- The work is provided "as-is" without any warranties or representations regarding the accuracy, completeness, or fitness for any particular purpose.
- The original creator and HEF make no claims about the use or suitability of the content.

Legal Compliance

- Users are responsible for ensuring their use of the content complies with all applicable laws, including local, national, or international regulations.
